I'm ok with side letter. But I'm confused a little with the papers. We still don't have main documents signed from your side (partnership agreement and so on). So I have two questions:

1. Do we need to sign agreement first?
2. From side letter I understood that I have to transfer some part of 1 million before closing date? Or it should be all 1 million?

No problem. We will sign the partnership document the the date we actually fund our first investment. All we are asking is that you review the sideletter. I'll come back for when it's needed

And then we would mutually agree but yes in this case $1m up front would be easiest

They dont have them)

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

Yeah they're selling them before they get them haha

It's very intereting

I guess they have bought it somewhere

Indirectly

17:34

But not from us

17:35

Hi [REDACTED]

I would like recommend you to take a look at one startup which could be interesting for [REDACTED]

It is called Wheely, London-based luxury ride-hailing service catered towards affluent and HNW individuals. Wheely has raised $28m to date and operates in Moscow, London and launching in Paris this summer. The business already has more than 3,500 chauffeurs across its network and a run rate of around $80m in gross bookings.

[REDACTED] is going to Founders Forum in London tomorrow I think. If anybody from [REDACTED] here maybe they could catch up?

Ilya

They provide incredible service, not comparable to Uber. You should try it when you are in London :)
